A Passion to Help Others Remove Fear, Find Freedom, and Live Their Authentic Life

Renée E. Bryan brings more than 35 years in financial services and education to an unusually human question: Why can people do everything “right” with money and still feel afraid?

A divorced single mother who left an abusive relationship and built a successful woman-owned business, Renée later watched her income fall to one-sixth of its former level. Facing financial hardship, she made an unconventional decision: move to Mazatlán, Mexico, reduce her living expenses, and pursue a lifelong dream of writing The Morality of Money.

Her approach to Fearless Finances combines financial literacy, economic understanding, and clearing the emotional baggage that influences our financial decisions. Her book introduces an eight-step decision-making process, including LET YOUR HEART SING—because financial responsibility matters, but so do joy and purpose.

Today, Renée encourages audiences to move beyond fear-based financial advice and make clearer, more values-aligned decisions. Her style is candid, practical, engaging, and grounded in decades of teaching financial professionals.
